

A high quality research experience for under-represented minority undergraduate students during the summer academic break

vetmed.illinois.edu/suretox

The SURETox training program will accept a total of seven under-represented, minority, undergraduate students per year who will spend ten weeks in the program during the summer of 2023.

PROGRAM GOALS:

- ▶ Match participants with faculty mentors who will direct the student to complete a hypothesis-driven project in the field of toxicology
- ▶ Help each student learn laboratory techniques and research skills
- ▶ Provide didactic training on animal use in research, the responsible conduct of research, and use of the electronic library
- ▶ Train students to prepare scientific posters and to present their work at scientific meetings
- ▶ Provide networking opportunities for students to meet other students and faculty members in research
- ▶ Provide students with information on academic vs. industry careers in toxicology
- ▶ Provide each participant the opportunity to participate in GRE Institute workshops to prepare for the Graduate Record Exam
